The Master of Education in Teaching and Curriculum is designed to strengthen the skills of educators in both public and private schools. The program is guided by a vision that prioritizes critical thinking, democracy, diversity, lifelong learning, nurturance, and scholarship. At its core, the program focuses on four key components of effective education: learning, curriculum, instruction, and assessment. The program provides students with opportunities to infuse scholarly research and practice to support educational change. Aligned with established teacher quality standards, this program is offered at Penn State Harrisburg.
