

COMMUNICATIONS, B.A. (UNIVERSITY COLLEGE)

Seven Penn State campuses are scheduled for closure after Spring 2027: DuBois, Fayette, New Kensington, Mont Alto, Shenango, Wilkes-Barre, and York. New students are not being admitted at these campuses.

Begin Campus: Any Penn State Campus

End Campus: Brandywine, Lehigh Valley, New Kensington

Program Description

With the rapid development of digital technologies over the last decade, the field of communications has seen unprecedented growth and convergence of medium in media both technologically and structurally. The communications degree program addresses strongly articulated employer requirements for the workplace through an integrated program model. The degree provides the basic theoretical foundations of the discipline, allows for appropriate branching outside the traditional curriculum, and permits a drawing from appropriate courses in the disciplines of information sciences and technology, communications, arts and sciences, English, and business.

The degree in communications provides two options for students who wish to develop their written and verbal skills in an effort to gain professional employment in fields such as public relations, publishing, speech writing, video and multimedia, production, and/or journalism.

Corporate Communications Option

Available at the following campuses: Brandywine, Lehigh Valley, New Kensington

In extending traditional organizational communication, strategic communication, and public relations to the digital age, this option prepares students to compete in a global society. The program is also effective as preparation for e-commerce.

Digital Journalism Option

Available at the following campuses: Lehigh Valley, New Kensington

In today's workplace, journalism graduates are required to regularly engage rapidly converging media in their work. This option offers graduates a competitive advantage by complementing traditional options (newspaper, magazine, radio, TV) with convergent course work designed to prepare students for professional journalism in the digital age.

What is Communications?

Communications is an academic discipline that deals with the creation and distribution of messages through media such as books, newspapers, television, radio, film, video games, social media, and the internet. Communications also involves studying how written text, speech, photography, video, and interactive content are used within professional fields including marketing, advertising, public relations, corporate communications, news media and digital journalism, and film.

You Might Like This Program If...

You are a strong writer, critical thinker, and creative person. This is a dynamic field that has an impact on the world.